NOTE DEMANDING GERMAN DISAVOWAL OF HOSTILE INTENT AND INSISTING UPON ASSURANCES AGAINST REPETITION OF LUSITANIA INCIDENT GOES TO BERLIN FROM PRESIDENT

NO THREATS ARE MADE BUT QUIBBLING REPLY WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED

Die is Cast and Further Relations With Germany Depend Upon Attitude Taken by Kaiser in His Answer

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Germany must act, not quibble nor promise. Summed up in a sentence, that is the United States' attitude in the negotiations growing out of the torpedoing of the Lusitania with its roll of American lives. America's last word is going forward to Germany this afternoon. The note was formally approved by the president at 10:15 a. m. today, signed an hour later by Secretary of State Bryan and immediately turned over to confidential secretaries to be reduced to code.

"You can say that the note is now going forward," said Secretary Bryan at noon. "It will make between 1,200 and 1,500 words and will be made public Friday morning. It will be in Ambassador Gerard's hands not later than an early hour tomorrow and he will present it to the German foreign office without delay."

It was evident from the attitude of every high government official today that they realize America's affairs have reached a crisis. The die is cast in the president's latest note.

It sets forth in language that cannot be misinterpreted that the United States considers the killing of more than 100 Americans a monstrous crime against civilization. Following as it did the Falaba, the Cushing, the Gulflight and other incidents, it is characterized as an open act of hostility that admits of no excuse. The United States expects all of these acts to be disavowed. It also expects that Germany will pledge herself as a nation to see that there is no repetition.

There are no threats made, according to those who are closest to the president. Rather, the position taken is that of a dear friend who realizes that his friendship has been violated without warrant. There is no note of apology, however. It is a frank and open demand for redress that the United States makes it plain it has a right to expect, as the result of the years of genuine friendship between the two nations.

No Clamor for War

The president and all members of his cabinet are being deluged in the meantime with letters and telegrams. Most of them profess a desire to stand by the president at the same time exhorting him to be firm. A number contain advice. Their contents were not made public but it is declared that for the most part they do not appeal for war.

The percentage of messages which advocate war is said to be small. From them all the president had admittedly drawn much encouragement. He is understood to have told some of his closest advisors today that he believes when the text of his note and it is his own note is published the American people will feel that the nation's honor has been appropriately safeguarded.

The president today took the position that there is no reason to assume Germany will not accept the note in the friendly spirit in which it was drawn, and agree to meet this government's demands, even though they call for a definite change in her methods of warfare. Such being the case he has refused to discuss the situation beyond the point of the preparation and dispatch of the note. The next move he has very frankly said, is Germany's. This government can do nothing until the kaiser's government acts.

No Special Session

Suggestions that he call congress together immediately in an extra session to prepare for national defense he has definitely rejected. His position is that to take such action at the present time would be a direct insult to a friendly nation which, despite the sinking of the Lusitania, the loss of Americans, and other apparent violations of Americans rights, he holds that Germany will continue to be as long as we enjoy diplomatic intercourse.

The president realizes, his friends say, that even though the German answer should be such as to cause a break between the two countries, there will be plenty of time to take whatever steps are necessary to maintain the national honor. He does not intend there shall be any occasion given to any nation to say that the United States did not exhaust all of the remedies of honorable diplomacy before going farther.

The German attitude was wholly an unknown quantity. Three possible forms of response were seen by officials here acquiescence in America's demands—such a reply as would lead to further negotiations—a definite refusal, politely worded or otherwise, to grant what President Wilson asked.

Perhaps the second of these theories had the greatest number of supporters. That the kaiser would go so far as to admit himself in the wrong and promise not to err again was not very generally believed. Yet in his latest note relative to "mistaken" German submarine attacks on neutral vessels some thought they saw an inclination on his part not to assume an entirely defiant attitude toward all the world.

The person who took this view thought he would grant indemnity readily. Otherwise, it was their view that he would so couch his reply as to call, no matter how urgently the Washington administration might wish to expedite matters, for further exchanges of notes, possibly extending the negotiations out over a considerable period of time.

Of hope that Berlin would unqualifiedly yield there was little talk.

Fears of a refusal were numerous, the general opinion in official quarters where this view was taken being the Teutonic government would courteously express regret for what Americans have suffered but would maintain that no modifications can be made in the Teutonic plan of campaign against the allies and especially the British, unless the latter discontinue their "starving out" policy against Germany, or the United States complies with the German demand for an embargo on American munitions shipments to the allies.

Since this qualification cannot be complied with, officials stated, such a reply would constitute a positive rejection of the Washington administration's demands.

U. S. Course Conditional

Consideration of the United States' course, it was believed, was unnecessary except on the theory of a German rejection. Complications might be only delayed, it was agreed, in the event of a prolongation of the negotiations but there was not much disposition to look ahead in a case of such a kind.

The point at issue was:

What would the administration do

LITTLE GIRLS' MILITARY BAND TO PLAY REAL MUSIC SATURDAY IN FIRST PUBLIC APPEARANCE

La Crosse has a start on most of the cities in the United States in martial preparedness. There is today in this city a complete military band of twenty-three pieces, and it is made up entirely of little girls, from eleven to fourteen years. It is probably the most unique organization of its kind in the United States.

Brass and reed instruments with drums make up the pieces and the personnel is made up of south side girls who have been practicing together for more than a year under the leadership of Martin Moulis, director of the organization.

The girls will make their first public appearance in La Crosse streets Saturday, when the band will serenade the TRIBUNE at 2 p. m. thereafter the musicians will repair to one of the downtown parks, or play in Main street.

Girls Blow Brass Horns

The members of the organization include:

Piccolos, Misses Kuschel and Miller; first clarinets, Misses Schaller and Bindel; second clarinets, Misses Paulson and Rudee; third clarinets, Misses Bennett and Stange; solo cornets, Misses Strehl and Strehl; first cornets, Misses Sophner and Robeck; altos, Misses Eeg and Paulson; trombones, Misses Bendel and Kuschel; baritones, Misses Muth and Bendel; basses, Misses Martin and Bendel; trap and snare drum, Miss Rudee.

Mr. Moulis organized this band on May 1, 1914. The first month, he says, it was uphill work mostly, in which the utmost patience and care had to be exercised. Toward the end of this month, however, he had the little tots playing the introduction of a four-four time march and the first half of a waltz from "The Pink Lady." Since that time they have had rehearsals three times a week and now feel ready to come before the public.

Twelve Year Old Cornetist

Miss Gertrude Strehl plays a B flat cornet and although she is only 12 years old, Mr. Moulis says she is already a good and reliable player. The first three B flat cornets, he says are all fairly good players.

The E flat bass, the oldest of the girls, is fourteen years old and very promising. Mr. Moulis says none of his players puff out their cheeks or show color in their faces while playing.

A regular summer program in which park concerts may figure is now being made up by the girls and will be ready for the public in a few days.

AUSTRIAN OFFERS OF TERRITORY REJECTED ITALY CLOSE TO BRINK

Important Announcement Which is Expected to Mean "War" Will be Made Within 48 Hours; Parliament Meets in Week Decision Will Come Then

ROME, May 13.—Italy today was very close to a declaration of war. What was heralded as Austria's final proposal in the interests of peace has been definitely rejected. In official circles it was said the government will not keep the world long in suspense—that an important announcement may be made within 48 hours.

Baron Sonnino today was closeted in an informal meeting with several members of the cabinet. It was stated positively, however, that the Austrian proposal was not up for reconsideration. Following the formal session of the cabinet yesterday Sonnino announced that the concessions offered by Austria had proven unacceptable to the cabinet, and hinted that Italy was about to end negotiations by a drastic step.

What will be contained in the announcement which it was reported is about to be made by the government was a secret today. In some quarters it was said the cabinet would give to the public a statement justifying its course in the negotiations with Austria. The intended effect of this would be to crystallize public sentiment in support of the government's position before the meeting of parliament one week from today, when Italy's decision is expected formally to be made known.

From authentic sources it was learned that Austria, in her last proposal to Italy, offered these concessions:

The cession of all portions of Trentino inhabited by Italians; home rule for Trieste, the cession of the Isonzo district with Gradisia, and a

GERMAN EMBASSY THINKS PACIFIC ISSUE IS POSSIBLE

Bernstorff Absolutely Denies Alleged Interview Saying Germany Will Refuse U. S. Demands

REPORTED PLEASED WITH U. S. TONE

Sources Close to Diplomats Give Definite Assurance to This Effect Today

WASHINGTON, May 13. — The German embassy believes Germany and America can meet on the basis of the American note, if outlines of the notes' contents as printed today are correct. The German embassy does not say so officially, Ambassador Bernstorff, in fact, refusing to talk further than to issue an absolute denial of a statement purporting to reflect the embassy's views. This alleged statement declared Germany's attitude on the American demands was to be a polite but a firm refusal to accept the conditions laid down.

The embassy's statement pointed out that the embassy itself so far was ignorant of the terms of the American note; that it had received no instructions whatever from the German government regarding the note and, finally, it was declared that no official connected with the embassy had expressed any opinion on the subject at all.

Beyond this the ambassador refused to go, saying "the matter is now between the two governments."

From sources close to the embassy it was possible, however, to gather definite assurances that the German government's representatives in Washington are pleased with the tone said to be taken by the American note. If, as reported, it contains references to alleged impropriety in putting a warning to Americans in the form of newspaper advertisements, the embassy is likely to take exception, pointing out that Secretary Bryan himself first made the warning public in giving out the German statement of February 14. The embassy's action in inserting advertisements resulted, it will be claimed only from a desire to make sure of wide publicity; and from an unwillingness to "accept the responsibility" of not having warned passengers.

At the embassy today none would say as to whether this danger still continues—in other words, whether the warning still holds—the simple remark "it no longer is necessary, everybody knows it now," being the furthest extent to which any one would commit himself.

Satisfaction is expressed in German circles over the announcement from New York that one American line will not carry contraband.

"That," so one German spokesman expressed himself, "is the most hopeful sign I've seen."

This same German, who talks authoritatively, declared that German expressions of regret are more than mere formality.

"It never was intended or desired that life should be lost," he said. "None would have been lost had the Lusitania not carried a cargo of ex-

NO EXTRA SESSION PLANNED UNLESS ACTION IS NEEDED

Pointed Out That Congress Can Be Assembled Quickly if Required and Billion Be Raised at Once

U. S. WILL "MAKE HASTE SLOWLY"

Diplomats Think Rupture of Diplomatic Relations Would Mean War Declaration from Berlin

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Possibilities of a break with Germany gave rise to much speculation concerning the course to be pursued by the United States in that event today. It was suggested that an extra session of congress would be called in the near future, but this suggestion was promptly squelched at the White house where it was made apparent that President Wilson considers that such action would be considered almost a direct insult to Germany just now.

This, it was stated, does not mean that the president is not alive to the possibilities that drastic action may have to be taken.

U. S. in Good Financial Position

He already has gone over this with the members of his cabinet. At that conference, it was pointed out that congress can be assembled in a very short time; that so far as the national debt is concerned, it is comparatively insignificant and that a war credit of a billion dollars for anything necessary could be voted in a hurry; and that because of enjoying this strategic position, the United States should "make haste slowly." This is what the president proposes to do.

Rupture of Relations Means War?

Stories that this government would content itself with breaking off diplomatic relations with Germany, taking no further steps in the event of an unfavorable reply to the note, meet with little aproval in diplomatic circles. It is openly asserted that this would be impossible. Germany, it is pointed out, is probably the proudest nation in Europe and breaking diplomatic relations would be a blow to that pride which almost certainly would be deemed to demand drastic action and would undoubtedly be followed by the immediate picking up of the gauntlet by the government.

BRITISH WARSHIP GOLIATH IS SUNK IN DARDANELLES

Goes Down with Loss of 500 Lives Is Admission of English Admiralty

SAME CLASS AS THE LOST OCEAN

Displacement Was 12,950 Tons and Carried Formidable Big Gun Armament

LONDON, May 13.—The British warship Goliath has been torpedoed at the Dardanelles, according to an official announcement from the admiralty this afternoon. The admiralty placed the loss of life at 500.

The Goliath was a 12,950 ton battleship of the same class as the Ocean, sunk inside the Straits on March 18 on the same day the battleships Irresistible and the French warship Bouvet were torpedoed and sunk. The Goliath was 418 feet in length over all and 74 feet at her beam. She carried four twelve inch guns and twelve six inch guns and was considered a very formidable warship.

The Goliath was built in 1896.

TRANSYLVANIA DUE IN WAR ZONE IN ABOUT 24 HOURS

Ship Under British Flag Has 874 Passengers and Fears for Her Safety Are Entertained

NEW YORK, May 13.—The Anchor liner Transylvania, carrying 874 passengers and flying the British flag, is due in the "war zone" off the British Isles some time tomorrow or tomorrow night, according to officials of the line. Owing to the reappearance of newspaper advertisements signed by the German embassy, warning Americans to stay off British ships passing through the "war zone," which appeared just before the Transylvania sailed, great interest is attached to the ship's voyage.

BRIDGE TO BE FREE AFTER SEPTEMBER 1 DECIDE ALDERMEN

North Side High School Project Recommended for Postponement for Another Year

NO ACTION ON TERMINALS

The North Side Aldermen Threaten to Bring High School Fight Onto Floor of Council

La Crosse is to have a free bridge across the Mississippi after September 1, this year.

The proposed North side high school will not be built until 1916 or later.

Action on the proposed river terminals, docks and wharves will not be taken by the city council until after the shippers' conference at Dubuque June 9.

Committees of the city council in joint session last night decided to recommend to the council at the May meeting tomorrow night that the wagon bridge, voted free by the people, be made so beginning September 1. There was scarcely any dissension to the bridge resolution, the only question being one of finance.

Alderman Paul W. Mahoney pointed out that the bridge is paying into the city treasury about $500 a month and that the city needs these funds at present. He proposed to make the bridge free beginning Jan. 1, 1916. The Smith ordinance provided that the bridge be made free on June 1. The date selected was a compromise between these two dates.

Free for Two Years

Under the terms of the recommendation made last night the bridge will be free for a period of two years, at the expiration of which time the tolls will again be assessed in case the Minnesota authorities do not improve the La Crescent turnpike and west approach to Pettibone park.

Action on the North Side High school will be deferred for a year, provided the majority report of the committees is passed by the council Friday. Aldermen Smith and Torrance locked horns over the High school last night with Alderman Mahoney and Kempter and a spirited debate took place in which the South side aldermen, backed up by statements by Superintendent Bene-

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Little Feet That Wouldn't Behave.

The Six Little Feet Went Scampering Out of the Yard.

"CHILDREN, tonight I will tell you about the two little feet that wouldn't behave and the four little feet that wouldn't behave, either," said daddy, beginning the evening story.

"In the first place, there were two pudgy little feet. They were fat and all dimples, and they were hardly ever still except when they were asleep, along with the rest that they belonged to. And even then they weren't altogether still all the time, for when dreams would come into a little curly head the little feet would kick, and sometimes they would kick awfully while a little big voice squealed just like a little piggie because of the nightmare."

"Oh, I know!" cried Evelyn. "The little feet belonged to a little girl, daddy."

"You don't know," put in Jack. "They might have been a little boy's."

"Wait!" warned daddy. "These two little feet were always in mischief, but there were four other little feet that were in still more mischief. These four little feet had soft pads on them, and they scampered up and down and all around, into all sorts of mischief, and they just wouldn't behave at all. And the two little feet and the four little feet went around together a great deal."

"Was it a doggie?" asked Jack, while Evelyn inquired, "Was it a kitten?"

"The little boy and the doggie," daddy went on, with just the wee flicker of a smile, "had lots of good times, but I'm afraid that they worried the little boy's parents very much. Sometimes the little boy would lead the doggie into mischief, and sometimes it would be just the other way, and between them they managed to keep people wondering what would happen next.

"Well, one day the two little feet ran out of doors and were met by the four little feet, and the six little feet went scampering out of the yard and down the road and into a field. And this was very wrong, for the six little feet had been told that they must not run out of the yard at all. But the four little feet ran ahead, while the doggie barked, and the two little feet followed him, and the little boy laughed. And they went into the woods and chased squirrels.

"And they reached home awfully late that night and found the big folks worrying. And I think they ought to have been spanked and put to bed without their suppers, the owners of those six little feet, but somehow I'm afraid they weren't. Every one was so glad to see them home, you see.

"Now you kiddies must run along to bed," ended daddy.

Here's a Chance To Name a Farm So It Will Stick

If you own a farm, trade-mark it!

In compliance with a recent act of the legislature, A. E. Thompson, register of deeds is prepared to list in his office, the names of every farm in La Crosse county.

The practice has been carried on in other states with success. Dairymen, cattlemen, truck garden growers, and other agriculturists have named their farms, and have frequently trade-marked their productions from the name of their farms.

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

AN ISLAND FOURSOME

By DOROTHY ALLEN

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

"It's a little bit of an island, you know, not large at all. Sometimes when there's a storm the sea comes clear up to the garden, but it's lovely there in the summer. I'm glad you could both run down to see Lawrence."

Gwen smiled at the two in the opposite seat. Smiled deliberately and with malice aforethought and most delightful impartially. Flick Habbeton and Dolf Cramer returned the smile each in his own way. Dolf's was broad and melting and fatuous. It bespoke adoration and utter helplessness. Flick's was full of a strange, cynical misery, as of one who would have said to the world, "Lo, she has landed me. Behold me pant and die."

"How's Larry bearing up?" asked Dolf.

"Well, of course he's not really fully recovered. It was awfully nice of you boys to come way out from the city to cheer him up. Aunt Helen and I do our best, but we're not like men, you know, and his own crowd. I'm glad we just happened to catch the same train."

Flick grinned out at New Rochelle fleeting by. He had waited for hours, it seemed, beside the grilled gateway back in the Grand Central to beat Dolf, and had wakened to find Dolf with the captured prize sauntering over from the ticket windows. He wondered how they could still even preserve the semblance of friendship. Was it not he who had worshipped Gwen Marquis from afar for two years? Hadn't he put up with Larry's general pugnaciousness and loquacity solely because he had a sister with a face like an apple blossom? Hadn't he monitored Larry all through his last year, pushing him along by sheer force, just to win the confidence and affection of Gwen? All this, while Dolf Cramer reigned in his own special field of endeavor, and took no more notice of Larry than if he had been a midge in the adjacent blue.

Then there had come the accident. It had been voted a pleasant and advisable thing by the junior class to place a goat of mature years and lively sense of justice in the private consulting room of the seniors, a goat dyed a deep, rich red, with black horns, and it was done. All juniors had been warned to go far from the scene of action, but Larry had lingered, being interested as the person who had assumed responsibility with the goat's owner. And he had been caught, a felony in junior eyes, caught and taken into a private room and imprisoned with the goat in the inner closet until the quality of mercy, strained to the minimum, released both.

Gwen had come after the remains. Larry was not injured vitally, but the goat had not chosen kindly and he was bruised, much bruised. Thereupon, Dolf Cramer had assumed command on seeing the patient's family. It was he who devised the pretty tale that made Larry a hero and hid the goat from the family history. It was he who convoyed Gwen around the campus, and showed her the beautiful effect through the stained glass window in the chapel at sunset and the wonderful sunrise view from the east loggia where the avenue of populars rose in stately silhouette like those in some far Italian garden.

Nobody had ever suspected Dolf of esthetic tastes. He had been bluff and hearty through the long, sane winter. His class name had been appropriate and, seemly, a name suited to his general temperament and manly proportions, for he was dubbed the "Porpoise." Flick loathed deception in any form. He could not see that by the alchemy of love, the soul of the "Porpoise" had bloomed like some mystic rose of gold. He could not see any of this, nor even grant him a partial right of way, for love did not give him any blooming roses. It only made him silent and suffering, and he took to leaning against corners of buildings with a face like Dante's death mask.

Yet he had not retreated. When the invitation had been given for him to visit Larry in his convalescent state, he had accepted, even while he knew that Dolf likewise was included. Shall a man drop from the firing line for a wound here and there?

"You'll both love Aunt Helen," said Gwen. "She came down on an earlier train with Joan. We just met Joan over at the Pennsy this noon. It seems as if you boys ought to know her. She's from Richmond, too, Joan Carruthers."

Then Flick turned his head and smiled at the "Porpoise." Did they know Miss Carruthers? The smile on Dolf's rotund face became fixed like Buddha's. It lacked spontaneity and innate joy. And Flick's humor rose.

"I have never met Miss Carruthers," he said, "but I have often heard her spoken of. She was very popular at Richmond, very popular."

At Sound Beach they took the car that wound along the shore line. Gwen said it wasn't very far, and then just the little walk across the sand dunes and beach.

"Larry has a boat that we use to cross over to the island in," she smiled up at Dolf. Dolf's stock was rising steadily. She kept near to him, and permitted his assistance over infinitesimal pools of water left by the tide. Yet Flick smiled at the far Long Island shore line and Dolf was pale. "It isn't far from shore."

It wasn't. Larry saw them from the distance, and sent forth a long hail of welcome. Though still wearing sundry bandages and plasters, he could navigate and wield oars, and he came after them jubilantly. Flick did not pretend to disguise Dolf's pre-eminence in the lists of love. He gave him freely the right of way now. He absorbed the conversation with Larry, and left the two to gaze into each other's eyes, only Dolf's gaze persistently wandered to the nearing island with a look of strange abstraction.

And when they had beached the boat and strolled up the little sandy path to the bungalow Gwen walked beside him slowly, confidingly, yet Flick smiled behind them and laughed at Larry's jokes without regret.

It appeared when they reached the broad veranda that Joan had met Dolf before, oh, long ago, down in dear old Richmond. Dolf stared at her as if fascinated. He perched up beside her on the railing and dallied with her mess of wet, clammy starfish that she was trying to straighten out to dry in the sun. And when she had fretted him awhile, she took Flick away from Gwen with one long sidelong glance from her hazel eyes, and went for a beach tramp.

"I didn't know you had met Joan before, Dolf," Gwen said impersonally. "Larry thinks the world of her."

"Joan is an epidemic," Dolf answered morosely. "She swept through our whole team when we went South to play the Virginias. They set her in front of us to dazzle our eyes, and I pitched grounders for three days. A fellow never exactly forgets a girl like that, you know, any more than he does a good big bump in the road that he hits and tumbles over. It's what you'd call infatuation, I suppose." He stumbled on, regardless of the steady, measuring glance of Gwen's eyes. "But it isn't real love, I tell you, when a fellow does find the real thing he knows the imitation."

Yet Gwen gazed musingly at the two figures circling the island shore. They kept very near to each other, bending over to search for shells among the driftwood and seaweed at the hightide mark. Then, as if he had caught her wireless, Flick raised himself and looked back at her to wave his hand.

"What a really resolute, manly sort of a boy Mr. Habbeton is," she said. "Larry was telling me how good he was to him all the year. He's very unselfish, I think. You can almost see by his face what sort of a man he is, can't you?"

"Flick has a very open face," replied Dolf guardedly. "He seems to be catching the epidemic all right."

"Oh, I don't know. I don't think he would be just satisfied with a flirtation somehow. He seems deeper than that. He told me that girls just seemed to represent certain abstract qualities to him. He thinks that accounts for the momentary attraction, don't you know."

"Wait till Joan finishes with him," Dolf hinted darkly. "You can see it starting up now."

Gwen looked meditatively down at the beach. It was not at all as she had planned, and yet it was. She had felt sorry for poor, good old Flick. She had invited Joan up to give him a new interest in life, to divert him, so to speak, and yet now that she saw them together, in proximitous propinquity, so to speak with all its attendant dangers, she felt a curious thrill of resentment. Did Dolf compensate for the loss of Flick? Dolf, who, by his own confession, had loved Joan?

It was Larry who carried the weight of conversation, with Aunt Helen's help, when the party gathered in the bungalow. Even Joan seemed thoughtful, and when she met Dolf's steady accusing gaze she flushed ever so slightly and turned to Flick. And Flick deserted his colors shamelessly. He sat out on the railing with Joan and sang in the moonlight. He took her for a stroll in the same moonlight. When the girls retired the little old-fashioned sprig of wild pink that Joan had worn in her hair was in Flick's buttonhole. Dolf smoked apart and let Larry babble on the good old days at college. But the next day he took up the challenge Joan had flung down. Faithfully he trotted after Gwen, and Gwen's eyes followed the two, who seemed to find the very lonesomest, cosiest nooks among the rocks to sit in. Somehow Dolf palled. She began to wonder how she could ever have overlooked Flick's sincerity. That was what counted in a man. It wasn't geniality and a perpetual smile. It was something that lay closer to the heart. Yet she had asked Joan to keep Flick busy, and Joan was surely doing it.

It was the end of a week's visit, a gorgeous night when the whole sea seemed gun-metal tint, and a big orange-colored moon came up to turn it golden. Gwen sat pensively watching a ship full rigged pass in silhouette across the path of gold. It was dark on the veranda. She sat in the shadow of the vines and saw Joan and Flick— no, it wasn't Flick, it was too short and chunky for Flick; it was Dolf himself. They came out of the living room, and it looked as if Joan were being pursued. At the railing she stopped and backed against it.

"Dolf Cramer, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. Let me alone."

"I won't," said Dolf, doggedly.

"I've stood this as long as I'm going to. Am I to stand around helpless and let a cub like Flick Habbeton walk off with the only girl I ever loved right under my nose?"

"Flick doesn't care for me that way," Joan replied softly. "He's simply wild over Gwen."

Gwen started to move, but a hand closed over hers from behind, and she felt Flick's presence. The ship had passed out of the golden path now, but every upcurling ripple on the beach was gilded.

"You do care, don't you, Joan?" begged Dolf, desperately. "Remember the old times back at Richmond? How many times did I propose to you then?"

"Every hour," laughed Joan. "If Flick had one hundredth part of your courage, Dolf, Gwen would never have wavered."

Around Gwen's shoulders stole Flick's disengaged arm, and she did not draw her hand away when he found it.

"He hasn't talked of anything else ever since I came," Joan went on. "It's been deliciously funny. He's been practicing on me, and he's scared to death of Gwen. She's rather—well—non-committal, you know, isn't she, Dolf?"

"I don't want to talk of anybody but you," murmured Dolf tenderly. "Gwen hasn't treated me to anything but descriptions of Flick's noble expression and splendid depths. Joan, have I got an able expression, too?"

"You're awfully cheerful looking after a week of 'poor old Flick,'" Joan said, thankfully. "Did I give you back your ring the last time, dear?"

Dolf's answer was inarticulate. The two shadows had merged as one. Flick said nothing. All his wooing had been done for him by his rival. He bent low over her, leaning his head against her soft, fragrant hair, and kissed the fingertips he held.

LONDON IS BITTER AGAINST GERMANS

LONDON, May. 13.—The feeling of bitterness against the Germans in London is increasing. A well known restaurant, run by a naturalized German, was forced to close this afternoon. Butchers with German names have been refused service in the central meat markets. Rioting is also threatened in several centers, especially in the north of England. Magistrates before whom persons arrested for demonstrations appear, express an understanding of the emotions, but urge restraint until the day of military reckoning comes.

A movement is growing to intern all enemy aliens for their own safety.

THAT INVASION

The notion that conquest of the United States by Germany would present about the same difficulties as a police raid on a newsboys' crap game naturally affords an engaging subject for journalistic speculation. Having decided on war, the Kaiser would simply blow up our fleet with submarines, land two hundred thousand veterans on Long Island, send them over to Manhattan by the Subway and sit down in the most convenient Weinstube to await ransom and surrender. The only opposition would come from a Broadway policeman, who would forbid the invading host to cross the street until he whistled—and who would be brained on the spot. Paralyzed by that assault on its most formidable symbol of authority, the city would hand over two million billion marks.

If any of these speculations have reached the German war office it must be overwhelmed with humiliation, because in forty years of anxious military scheming it never happened to think of a feat so easy, safe and profitable. Or possibly the German war office has other views as to the feasibility of the adventure.

With a fleet theoretically not far inferior to that of England and with military resources nearly equivalent to those of England at his back, Napoleon vainly bent his ambition for many months to getting across twenty miles of salt water to England. If invasion of the United States is so simple, his task was one that an infant in arms might have undertaken. Our only foreign war in more than a century was forced by us on Spain. In over a hundred years no nation has sought a quarrel with the United States, though on more than one occasion we have given a pretty fair opening for a quarrel—notably in the Venezuela affair.

If there existed abroad that readiness to pounce on the United States which weavers of invasion yarns assume, and the pouncing were achievable with such neatness and dispatch, it would be somewhat difficult to account for a hundred years of complete immunity from foreign aggression.

On the other hand, except that there had been a whole generation of bustling preparedness for war in Europe, with constant inciting of international jealousy and suspicion, and with perennial alarms by paper strategists over what this or that foe might do, it would be impossible to account for the present situation on the Continent.

Our own situation, with all its admitted unpreparedness, seems to us decidedly preferable. In spite of that unpreparedness the country undoubtedly holds the comforting assurance that the United States is the last nation which any other nation wants to fight—and fighting anybody at all is not a proposition that now rouses any particular enthusiasm in Europe.—The Saturday Evening Post.

We were going to attend the Y. M. C. A. concert tonight until we noticed on the program, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier." So we made a date with the dentist.

Why press operators drink: "Having retaken the town of Zaleszszki, the Slav left wing is pressing southward upon Kryszczatek, 23 miles north of Czernowitz."

The public baths will not open until June 15, but there are many peeling shoulders among the younger generation already.

With vacation only a month away 530 high school students have signed up for summer school. Has playin' hookey gone out of fashion too?

The office pessimist has arrived at a decision. He says he'd rather be in jail than be president just now.

RAILROADS KICK ON LATEST BILL FOR SHORT TRAINS

MADISON, Wis., May 13.—(Special.)—The representatives of the three leading railroads of the state appeared before the senate committee on corporations yesterday afternoon in opposition to the Staudenmeyer bill to limit the length of trains to one-half mile. A. S. Herz and J. B. Pratt, representing the railway employes, favored the enactment of the law. They said that shorter trains would be equipped with full crews and that there would be fewer accidents.

P. C. Eldridge of the Milwaukee road said that the call of the people was for lower freight rates. He declared that the railroads had improved their rolling stock, cut down their grades so that trainloads could be hauled. He pointed out that if the railroads are to be limited in the length of trains all of their preparations for large economies in the hauling of freight would be blasted. Similar arguments were made by E. E. Nash of the Northwestern line and E. G. Potter of the "Soo." No action was taken by the committee on the bill.

GETTING BETTER STOCK

The northern counties are already starting the year's livestock improvement. Marinette county reports that one carload of cows has already been received and that more will follow. These cows are mainly for new settlers who have come from Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. Wherever time is needed in which to pay for stock it is given under an organization of businessmen and bankers of the county. This plan prevails in many of the counties. The settlement and development of the upper counties creates a demand for Wisconsin bred cows that formerly went to other states.

At the Spring Wedding

You may ask why I'm sighin'?
Well—I'll tell you—listen here:
To see me almost cryin'
At a weddin's sort of queer.
But what's the use of smilin'
When the smile ain't in yer heart,
An' worried thoughts come pilin'
That two good pals must part?
Oh, yes, she'll always love me,
But while she won't be to blame,
She won't be thinkin' of me
As she did: 'twon't be the same.
You ask me why I'm sighin'?
Well, here's why I'm feelin' bad,
it's silly—no denyin',
But I'm Mary's old fool dad.

The following question was put to some young pupils in a Philadelphia public school:

"There is a family of five children. The mother has only four potatoes to divide among them. She wants to give each child an equal share. What is she to do?"

Silence prevailed in the class room: every pupil was calculating diligently. Finally one boy put up his hand.

"Well, Sammy, what would you do?" asked the teacher.

"Mash the potatoes, ma'am."—Harper's Magazine.

"Poor Mr. Hennypeck!" exclaimed Brownson, sympathetically. "It wasn't enough that his wife should own and operate him, body and soul, Mrs. Hennypack has now joined the suffragettes."

"Don't breathe a word," replied Smithson, "but Hennypeck is tickled to death. His wife speaks at all the outdoor meetings and is so hoarse when she gets home that she can't raise her voice above a whisper."—Puck.

"At a time like this," said the first man, "old Izaak Walton would have indulged in philosophy. Have you anything on your mind you might work off just now to relieve the monontony?"

"Nothing but this," replied the other. "I suppose it is by refusing to bite and compelling fishermen to philosophize that fish get the reputation of being brain food."

"Is the editor in?" asked the man with the unbarbered hair and the shiny coat, as he fished a roll of paper from his pocket.

"No," replied the office boy, "he has just gone out."

"This is the third time I have called to see him," growled the caller, "and each time you have told me that he has just gone out. What's the explanation?"

"I don't know," answered the office boy, "but I guess he must have been born under a lucky star."—Lippincott's.

"How about the sanitary conditions at your hotel? Is everything healthy?" asked Jimpson.

MILWAUKEE TO PAY UNCLE SAM $2,250 FOR SMALL OFFICE

The Milwaukee Railroad company yesterday concluded a lease contract with the government postoffice department, whereby the railroad will occupy a small portion of the new railroad terminal building at Second and State streets. The contract was recorded with A. E. Thompson, register of deeds.

The Milwaukee will pay $2,250 yearly for the use of the space, and has contracted to stay in the building for ten years. This is considered a new rent mark for La Crosse.

Postoffice authorities erected the terminal building here when the terminal was moved from Winona last fall. Parcel post and other mail is being distributed to points throughout the northwest from this city.

WILSON WILL GO TO FLEET REVIEW

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Secretary Tumulty said this afternoon that there was no truth in reports that President Wilson had decided to abandon his trip to New York to review the fleet or that he would go by rail instead of water. The plan, he said, was for the president to leave Saturday on the Mayflower for the voyage.

A Second "Under Two Flags"

THE RED MIRAGE

At their head a horseman rode in majestic loneliness. A red streak from the dying sun, lighting up his burnished accoutrement, threw into relief the splendid outline of his figure. A moment later his horse swerved as though startled by an instinctive recognition of danger, and in that same instant Farquhar's command rang out:

"Ready—present—fire!"

The answering volley broke like a crack of thunder on the stillness, and when the smoke cleared a dozen saddles in the foremost ranks of the enemy were empty. Taken utterly by surprise, the troop swung round in disorder and burst into a short headlong retreat. But it was the panic of a moment. The man riding alone remained motionless. He had reined his horse up in the midst of his fallen comrades, and faced the invisible death like a bronze statue of eastern chivalry, upright, fearless, contemptuous. The bullets screeched past him, but he seemed invulnerable. His right hand was raised and his voice sounded high above the tumult.

"La Ilala illa 'llaku!"

He was quite alone. His followers had vanished in a long column of dust, but his voice reached them. Like some supernatural force it seemed to grip them, to check them in the full course of their panic-stricken flight. They halted—turned. In the dim light, thickened by slow-rising clouds of smoke, Farquhar saw a flash of fire which as the Bedouins broke into a return gallop circled around their heads, scintillating like continuous lightning in a tempest of rolling, crackling thunder.

"La Ilala illa 'llaku!"

Fanatic, splendid they swept on into the teeth of a withering death which left no trace. A horse screamed and rolled over, but in an instant the serried ranks closed over the fallen rider and came on faster—a whirlwind of superb courage that no power could check. The death that threatened them recoiled impotent. They raced one another for the gates of Paradise: they bore down upon an enemy fighting only instinctively for a life that was already worthless. Farquhar glanced anxiously along his little line of men. They were firing recklessly, hopelessly. Their faces were terrible—no longer with the mad rage of battle, but with the hypnotic horror of the avalanche which in a minute was to sweep them from existence. He called to them and they responded with patient dog-like obedience, but he knew that for them the fight was already over. This was the agony of death. Some one touched him. He turned. It was Destinn. Destinn, with great beads of perspiration rolling down his gaunt cheeks, his eyes blazing, his whole body shaken by a storm of passion.

"Give me a rifle!" he shouted. "Give me a rifle! I won't die like this! If it's only for the old country's sake give me my chance! Afterward you can do what you like—and be damned to you!"

It was English—pure, flawless, if vituperative English. It was like music in that hellish medley of foreign screams and curses. Farquhar made no answer. He cut away the leather thongs that bound Destinn, and thrust his spare rifle into the trembling hands.

"There—and be damned to you, too!" he said gaily.

Desinn knelt down. They took aim together like men engaged in mimic warfare. Gotz dragged himself up alongside. He was smiling pleasantly with a cartridge between his teeth.

"I like dying in good company," he shouted, as the impediment was jammed into the smoking breech of his rifle. "That's the new Prophet—Ali-Mahomed—in the front there. If we could bring him down it might break their backbone. I back myself against you two with a fifty-franc note I haven't got."

"Hundred!" said Destinn.

"Two hundred!" Farquhar laughed.

They fired in turn. The Arabs were now within four hundred yards. Their pace had not slackened for an instant. Farquhar sprang to his feet.

"Cease firing—fix bayonets!"

He raced out alone to meet the enemy. The hail of bullets had been a spur to their fanatic daring—the sudden silence checked them. They wavered, suspecting a trap in this strange lull, seeing in the lonely figure the one thing they feared—the supernatural, the unknown. Not a shot was fired. For an infinitesimal second of indecision both sides waited. Gotz, with his rifle against his cheek, his finger on the trigger kept up a soft flow of good-humored expletive.

"Mad—mad as Englishmen, but oh, gods of my fathers, what sublime method!"

Farquhar had covered fifty yards before the enemy had grasped his purpose. Then with a sort of delirious triumph their leader burst through the ranks of his followers and thundered down upon the doomed man with the superb arrogance of his race, disdaining a peril that seemed contemptible. He had outdistanced the horsemen behind him when Farquhar knelt. He took aim deliberately. Destinn drew his breath between his teeth, and no man in that hopeless group of defenders stirred. The whole struggle had concentrated, had become a duel between man and man—courage and courage, eastern fanaticism and western nerve. His opponent was within twenty yards when Farquhar fired. An irrepressible groan burst from Destinn's lips.

"Missed—by heaven!"

Farquhar sprang to his feet. The Arab was already on him—an immense engulfing shadow which blotted out the light. Those watching for the end saw the flash of a bayonet—heard the jarring rasp of steel against steel, and then Ali-Mahomed's horse swept on riderless. Simultaneously flame burst from a hundred rifles. Destinn led the charge. Behind him raced a hundred cheering men who an hour before had clamored for his life. He ran like a boy, waving a smoking useless rifle, shouting madly, while Gotz thundered at his side. It was two to one, exhausted infantry against cavalry in full course. But the miracle had been performed. The incalculable element in all battle, the superstition of men's hearts, had fallen in the scale. The whirlwind died down. Within a few feet of their fallen leader the heroic Arab host faltered, broke and fled.

THE HAIR BEAUTY THAT BELONGS TO YOU

So many who have long known that hair beauty was certain to follow upon systematic hair care have been loath to commence what they mistakenly think too much trouble. Proper hair care means only keeping the scalp and hair perfectly clean by use of some preparation made for shampooing, not for general cleansing. You can enjoy the best that is known for about three cents a shampoo by getting a package of Canthrox from your druggist. Dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

NORTH SIDE MEN BOOST FOR SCHOOL NEAR LOGAN SITE

Individual Pledges of Support Made at Meeting of League Last Night; Excursion Aug. 27

Resolutions favoring the building of a north side high school near the present site of the Logan school were passed last night by the North Side Progressive league at its regular monthly meeting in Woodman hall, St. James and Rose streets.

Much time was spent in discussion of the proposed move of the Board of Education, not a member of the league present putting in a dissenting voice. Agitation for the building of the school was started several months ago by the league, several members conferring with members of the city council and the board of education. The members last night pledged themselves to exert all influence to secure the institution for the north side.

Excursion Committee Reports

Committeemen George Baum, J. G. Dubraks and Frank Geisenheimer reported favorably on the matter of an excursion in benefit of the North Side Military band, setting August 27 as the date. It has been impossible to book a date sooner than that time.

Resolutions were passed requesting Secretary Robert Lowry to advise the common council regarding the condition of Hagar street between Mill and Rose streets. The street is badly in need of repairs, being one of the most used cross streets on the north side.

John Manke reported that a committee of aldermen has inspected St. Andrew street between Mill and Sumner streets, promising to have a sidewalk built on the north side of the street leading to the plant of the Interstate Oil company and the North La Crosse Lumber company.

HOBOES LIKE COPS DO NOT STAY OUT WHEN RAIN FALLS

"See America First," the slogan adopted since the outbreak of the European war, has apparently been taken seriously by others than those of the de luxe traveling class. Mike Yakovin, Apostle Petro and Jordan Andrew, from Portland, Ore., stopped off in the city for a short time Wednesday night and this morning on their way through the country.

They didn't stop at the best hotel in the city, however. Nor did they make their arrival in buffet car style. They merely, just matter-of-fact like, jumped off a freight train as it slowed down in the yards of the Milwaukee road, arriving by side door Pullman.

And then the next thing for them to do was to hunt up a place to sleep. They thought for a while of sleeping under the sky, but much lightning and ominous thunder served to change their minds. So they hunted up the La Crosse municipal hotel, famous over many states as the best of its kind in the land.

At No. 2 police station they were received cordially, were given a place to sleep and yesterday morning were fed on biscuits and sausage. Their stay in the city, however, was brief, the warnings of the police evidently having their effect. Should they be found here again, they might expect a term in a place less pleasant than their lodging place last night.

DR. HOUCK TALKS OF NORWAY'S LIFE ON NORTH SIDE

Narration of the events leading up to the declaration of Norwegian independence on May 17, 1914, and a discussion of its effect on Norway and other countries of Europe will be contained in the address of Dr. Oscar Houck before the Men's society of the Charles Street Lutheran church tomorrow evening. The meeting of the society will be held in the church parlors and will be distinctly a celebration of the one hundred and first anniversary of the declaration of independence in Norway over Sweden.

The exercises will be the second "Syttende Mai" celebration in the church this week, a program having been held last night in the church parlors by the Young People's society. Several vocal and instrumental numbers were given. The parlors were crowded to overflowing, the exercises attracting people from every Norwegian congregation on the north side. Refreshments were served.

PIKE PERCH FRY ARE PLANTED HERE IN MILLION LOTS

But one week after the consignment of five millions of pikeperch eggs were received from the government station at Put-in-Bay, Ohio, five millions of tiny pike perch fry, scarcely a half inch in length, have been planted in waters adjacent to La Crosse and neighboring towns.

On Saturday, Monday and Tuesday J. G. Dubraks, acting for the La Crosse Counting Hunting and Fishing association, planted upwards of two millions of the fry in the sloughs and rivers near La Crosse, including Black river, Colman slough and several sloughs along the Mississippi and the Black rivers. The remaining four millions have been sent to outlying towns and communities, the demand at present exceeding the supply. Captain Hugo Crasser is in hopes another consignment of eggs will be received soon to fill the many orders.

Thousands of rainbow and brook trout eggs are shipped weekly out of the city. A bid has been made by the La Crosse Counting Hunting and Fisning association for several thousand of the fry to be planted around La Crosse.

MOVIES HOLD THE CROWDS PAST USUAL TIME ALONE WHITE WAY

Theaters Cooler Than the Street and Easier to Reach Than the Seashore With Big Fans to Cool Heated Brows

NEW YORK, May 13.—Broadway theater goers who usually desert the Great White Way for the cooling seaside with the first flash of hot weather are still to be seen in the neighborhood of Forty-second street and Broadway. This class of Manhattan's theatrical population, which in former years has always neglected the bright lights at this time of the season, are still lingering. And here's the secret—the motion picture theaters are the magnet.

And it is not alone the money that keeps these thousands of people in the heart of the city these scorching afternoons, although in many cases this consideration looms up mighty big, for the war has made it necessary for almost every one to economize. But the real explanation of the great crowds seen on Broadway in the hot weather is that the "movie" houses are often many degrees cooler than the street. They are also dearer than the seashore and at the same time entertaining.

This has been made possible by the installation of huge electric fans, which though they make considerable noise afford the audience cooling breezes the same as if they were sitting on the sands at Coney Island. This is possible of course, in a "movie" house where it would not be feasible in a regular theater, for noise does not detract from the motion pictures. The electric fans make enough noise to drown out the normal speaking voice, but as speaking movies are not a part of Broadway's diet there is no objectional feature to the latest device of the Broadway managers to entice spectators.

And besides the movie houses in the regular theaters, many of the roof gardens afford New Yorkers, and its thousands of daily visitors, a cool spot where they can be both comfortable and entertained. Managers of these amusement places say there seems no limit to the movie fan's appetite and although comedy is their favorite almost any kind of a film, as long as it is full of action "goes."

VICTROLA BOUGHT BY HIGH SCHOOL

High school students and teachers Wednesday morning attended a recital of no mean nature. Two large Victrolas were brought to the high school for trial to determine which would be purchased with the money donated to the school by the glee clubs. In order that students should be able to judge, many records were played through most of which were famous selections by noted singers. A selection by Harry Lauder set the audience roaring with laughter and others of a more sober nature induced opposite sentiments.

A number of records from "The Mikado" and "The Pirates of Penzanz" (both of which operas have been given by the high school glee clubs) pleased the members of the glee clubs especially as it afforded them a chance to hear those pieces as rendered by famous choruses. During these number subdued humming was heard throughout the room from enthusistic members of the clubs.

The school decided to purchase the larger Victrola and invest one hundred and fifty dollars in this manner. The glee clubs alone had not this much money but a check from a philanthropical citizen for twenty-five dollars fills the deficit and enables the school to purchase the beautiful machine. As no money was left to purchase records, it has been decided that a "Record shower day" will be set when anyone who wishes to donate records for the instrument will be welcomed with thanks.

CIGARETS APPROVED BY STATE SOLONS LICENSE LAW UP

Hereafter Adults May Buy "Coffin Nails" but They Will Be Prohibited to Minors

MADISON, Wis., May 13. — The senate at last night's session held with the assembly that the sale of cigarets to minors should be absolutely prohibited but that their sale to adults should be permitted. It ordered to third reading the Dobie bill prohibiting their sale to minors but allowing adults to purchase them from licensed dealers. An amendment by Senator Bosshard making the dealer's license fee $10 instead of $5 was rejected, as was an amendment by Senator Bray striking out the clause which made it a misdemeanor for a minor to refuse to disclose where he procured cigarets. The present law on this subject is generally a dead letter, and this bill seeks to reach the problem of keeping cigarets from the youth of the state in a workable way. The bill will undoubtedly be concurred in when it appears on the senate calendar next Friday or Saturday. The bill was ordered to third reading by a vote of 23 to 3, the dissenters being Senators Ackley, Albers and Bray.

The senate engrossed the Richards bill bringing the sale of groceries and meats in Milwaukee under the Sunday closing law. Technically they are listed by the terms of the bill as not "works of necessity or charity."

Considerable discussion ensued on the senate bill relieving assessors of the duty of reporting agricultural statistics. Senator Bennett fought for it, saying the assessors of his district were unanimous in favor of it. Senator Culbert conducted the case against repeal. The bill was finally killed by a vote of 16 to 10.

A Milwaukee bill by Mr. Zinn, which recently passed the house, to permit a city which purchased a city market by special bonds to turn such market over for playground purposes, had a stormy time in the senate but was finally ordered to third reading. The senate concurred in Assemblyman Schroeder's bill requiring street railway companies to sprinkle the streets between their tracks and one foot each side with water or oil as the council may direct.

Several other bills on Wednesday's calendar were laid over.

Before a few relatives and close friends Catherine M. Lee and R. MacConnell Andrews were married in Chicago Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews are both well known in La Crosse. Mrs. Andrews was secretary of the Associated Charities until last fall, when she resigned to accept a position at Elgin, Ill. Mr. Andrews was a member of the staff of both The Tribune and the Leader-Press.

Mrs. Andrews is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton R. Lee of Lincoln, Neb., and Mr. Andrews is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Andrews of Galesburg, Ill.

The Rev. Frank R. Miller, pastor of the Baptist church of Elgin, a friend of the groom, officiated at the ceremony, using the ring service. The marriage occurred at 5 o'clock in the living room, which was artistically decorated in pink, white and green flower baskets filled with pink snap dragons and white baskets of pink roses being used. After the ceremony a dinner was served in the dining room, which was decorated with huge baskets of pink roses.

The bride wore a quaint white taffeta gown, fashioned after the styles of 1860. She wore a French bouquet of garden flowers.

Mrs. Andrews until recently was the secretary of the Associated Charities at Elgin. Before taking up social work she attended the University of Nebraska and also the University of Chicago.

Mr. Andrews, who is a Knox college man, is connected with Sears, Roebuck & Co. in the advertising department.

War Office News of Fighting

PARIS

PARIS, May 13.—"Brilliant successes" for the allies in the great battle now being waged from Arras to the sea were claimed in dispatches received here today and later confirmed by the war office.

In the woods east of Carency, French troops have captured additional trenches. Further gains, according to correspondents at the front, will force the Germans to abandon their positions entirely.

North of Carency, Hill No. 125 has been taken by the French. Coupled with the gains elsewhere in this region, the French have made important progress toward Lens, their main objective.

The British progress against La Basse is proceeding satisfactory despite the admitted fact that the English troops have suffered heavy losses.

Fierce fighting around Neuville continues.

PETROGRAD

PETROGRAD, May 13.—Reinforcements are being rushed to the support of the Russian army east of the San, according to a semi-official statement given out here today. Though the Slavs continue to fall back at some points, the main offensive of the Austro-Germans apparently has nearly spent itself in exhausting attacks against the Russian lines.

The idea that Przemysl might again fall into the hands of the enemy was scouted by war office officials.

The war office today minimized the importance of the Austro-German offensive in the Uszok pass region. It was asserted that while the Russian army in this section withdrew to positions northwest of Uszok, it successfully resisted every effort by the enemy to press on.

Heavy emphasis was laid on the continued successes of the Russian left wing, operating north of the Bukowina frontier. Having retaken the town of Zaleszszyki, the Slav left wing is pressing southward upon Kryszczatek, 23 miles north of Czernowitz.

At no other seasons of the year is scientific tailoring put to so strong a test as with Spring and Summer clothes. If your cold weather clothes are not warm enough, you put on a heavy overcoat.

But when the warmer days are here, and the overcoat is discarded, you look for light-weight clothes—and the lighter they are, the greater your comfort.

But—and here is where the test comes: partly lined or totally unlined clothes are the greatest tax upon tailoring skill.

To hold their shape, such clothes must be of pure wool, hand-tailored in the vital parts, and skilfully put together with brains as well as thread and needle.

And last, but not least, the cloth must be shrunk "to the limit." You get these features in

Floating Bodies Sighted and U. S. Consul Urges Relatives to Furnish Means of Identification

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, May 13. —Consul Frost today requested that relatives of Americans lost in the Lusitania disaster immediately file with the American consulate here thorough descriptions of the persons missing. The request was conveyed in a dispatch to Ambassador Page at London.

"Reports have been brought to me that several fishing craft have sighted floating bodies," said Consul Frost. "The search is becoming more thorough and we anticipate that many more bodies will be recovered. Letters or cards that might identify victims may be so water soaked by this time that identification by that means would be out of the question."

CHILE SENDS NOTE IN SHARP TERMS TO THE GERMANS

Incensed Over German Protest Against Acceptance of English Apology for Sinking Dresden Near Chile

SANTIEGO, Chile, May 13.—Though strict secrecy was enforced here today it was learned that government officials are incensed over the text of the German note regarding the sinking of German cruiser Dresden out the Juan Fernandez Islands by British warships on March 14.

Germany, it was stated, protested against the acceptance by the Chilean government of England's apology for attacking the Dresden in Chilean waters. Her protest was couched in such terms that the Chilean government is reported to have made a sharp reply. Officials would not comment on the report that Chile threatened to sever diplomatic relations.

REV. PEACOCK HEAD OF BAPTIST BODY IN THIS DISTRICT

La Crosse Valley Association Elect Local Pastor as Moderator and Bangor Man Clerk

Rev. W. J. Peacock of La Crosse, was chosen moderator of the La Crosse Valley Baptists and Rev. W. B. McCrary of Bangor, was elected clerk and treasurer at the semi-annual meeting of the Valley Baptist association held at Warrens, which closed Wednesday. Sixty-one messengers from churches in the district participated in the conference and ten churches were represented.

The feature of the session were the addresses by Dr. D. D. McLaurin of Madison, and the report of the unique situation which Pastor Gibson of Warrens occupies. Rev. Gibson does a remarkable extension work in which he is ably sustained by his church. His parish includes nine stations which look to him for preaching and pastoral care, covering all the available school houses within a radius of five miles.

To Purchase Automobiles

The association will follow up a suggestion made by Dr. McLaurin, to secure action by the state convention which will make it possible to provide automobiles for pastors like Rev. Gibson, so that larger country parishes may be managed. The state convention has a chapel fund which may possibly be used in this way.

The association was the most successful in years. The Warrens church set a new pace in methods of entertaining. The church building, recently re-built, is a model of efficiency and beauty. It has a modern baptistry, a complete equipment for Sunday school purposes, dining room and kitchen, and indirect lighting. With an expenditure of $3,500, the whole plant is a marvel of architectural planning and good taste. It is the only church in Warrens and is the pride of the community.

Next year the meetings go to Whitehall. A mid-year meeting is provided for, also a ministers' retreat. The association officers, including the heads of the woman's work and young people's societies, are to complete a tour of the churches, spending a day with each church.

Minority Report is Proposed

Alderman Mahoney's recommendation that "counter" bonds of $10,000 a year for five years be issued was lost after Principal B. E. McCormick of the High school had declared that with careful classification the South side school would be able to house the students for another year.

The North side aldermen will bring the fight into the council floor, it was announced last night, when Aldermen Mahoney, Kempter, Grover and Schulze prepared a minority report which will be submitted Friday night.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 13.—John D. Rockefeller today won his injunction suit to restrain Cuyahoga county from collecting taxes on $311,000,000 worth of intangible property. Federal Judge Clark granted the injunction, rendering a decision covering nineteen closely typewritten pages.

Clarke refused to enjoin the county from collecting taxes on two automobiles, listed by former Taxers Agnew and Fackler at a value of $8,000.

BOSSHARD OFFERS AN AMENDMENT

His Suggestion for Water Power Bills Causes Discussion to Go Over Until Next Week

MADISON, Wis., May 13.—After discussing the Ackley water power bill for two hours further consideration was postponed until next Wednesday, a substitute amendment being offered by Senator Bosshard. The substitute amends the repeal clause of the present law and provides for compensation to riparian owners at the time of taking over by the state or other public utility.

Senator Ackley addressed the senate at length, presenting the pater power view. He was followed by Senator Bray, in support of the bill. The cabinet system of government for Wisconsin was endorsed in the senate in the engrossment of the Bray resolution which provides for the appointment of secretary of state, state treasurer and attorney general by the governor. The vote was 14 to 13.

officials to resent bitterly the tolerant suggestions of the British government leaders and British newspapers that, in the event of war, the United States should agree to speed up her factories and keep the allies supplied with munitions, possibly lending our very efficient fleet, but not sending troops to take any part in the present attempt to crush Germany. This government, it was stated, cannot accept any such suggestion, which it was agreed the millions of Americans of German descent would be justified in resenting.

If this government must go to war with Germany, it was declared, it must go to war for America's honor and for no other cause.

Sinking Not Intended

In German circles here it was stated that confidential advices indicate there never was any intention of sinking the Lusitania. Her torpedoing was deliberate, it is stated, but it was believed that she actually was almost unsinkable and all that was hoped for was to fill several of her watertight compartments so that she either would have to be beached or have her passengers and crew taken off the ship, sinking later in shallow water. The torpedo, however—and German reports say there was only one torpedo, not two or three, as according to British accounts—struck forward, in the middle of her battery of boilers, which deluged with the inrush of cold water, exploded, tearing the entire forward bottom out of the ship. These Germans agree, however, that the great loss of life among non-combatants might nevertheless provide an excuse for meeting the American demand that the torpedoing of passenger-carrying vessels cease.

Testing Precious Stones.

The science of optics has in the last year or so given much aid to jewelers in making tests that are said to be absolutely conclusive as to the nature of a gem. The refractive index, or the power of bending light rays, is determined as to precious stones in the same way as that of the spectacle lenses which the opticians sell.

GERMAN OFFICERS CONFIDENT THEY CAN HOLD LINES

Equally Firm in Belief in Success of Ypres Offensive Where Bloodiest Fighting Is On

(By Carl W. Ackerman, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY, BRUSSELS, May 10, via The Hague and London, delayed.—After a week with German officers in Belgium and France, I find absolute confidence in the German ranks that the allies will never be able to penetrate the German lines.

There is an equally firm belief in the success of the German offensive around Ypres. Officers told me the fighting in that locality has been the bloodiest of the war. The British troops, they said, bore the brunt of the fighting and suffered unparalleled losses.

I spent a day in the first line trenches in northern France. Our party breakfasted in the woods during hot artillery fire.

I noticed a decidedly favorable change in the attitude of the German officers toward America. Six generals and one Bavarian prince dined a party of neutral correspondents, who were alternately escorted everywhere along these sections of the battle front. The highest officers referred repeatedly to Germany's cordial relations with America. During one of the trips a colonel picked up an exploded shell stamped "U. S." The German officers commented regretfully on the loss of life aboard the Lusitania, but added it was imperative that Americans avoid belligerent ships.

BOLD, MEAN THIEF TOOK DUCKLINGS UGLY ONE AND ALL

Someone, in the opinion of William Layman, 1827 Farwell street, is a real mean thief.

Eighteen little ducklings, the pride of the Layman fowl yard, were stolen from their coop last night. No intimation of the theft was learned until Mr. Layman awoke this morning and inspected his chicken and duck yard—and the duckies were gone.

The coop door was open. Sorrow reigns in the Layman household, and the police have been notified of the theft.

If the Lusitania had floated any time at all, every passenger could have been rescued. ENGLISH HOLD LAST GERMAN WIRELESS

CAPETOWN, S. A., May 13.—German southwest Africa, comprising an area of 322,450 square miles, is now almost entirely in the hands of the British, according to official dispatches from Gen. Botha today. Martial law has been declared in Windhoek, captured by the colonial troops yesterday, and the last German wireless station outside Europe is now under British control.

SAYVILLE NOT CLOSED

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Captain W. H. Bullard, superintendent of the naval radio service, said today that he had heard nothing of the closing of the Sayville wireless station, which was reported. He added that, as he would be the official to close it, if such a thing were done, he was sure the rumor was groundless.

FIRES SHOT AT UNREAL INVADERS

Sparta Man Shoots Up His Own House Under Hallucination of Attack

SPARTA, Wis., May 13.—Returning to his home last night from a sanitarium at Prairie du Chien, where he had been under treatment, Charles Worth turned loose with a revolver and pursued two imaginary assailants about the house. Worth thought a man and a boy were attacking him, and fired a number of shots through windows and into the walls. City Marshall George King took him into custody early this morning, and he is still violent.

Worth's mother, eighty years old, was in the house, but was not present during the shooting.

NO THREATS BUT QUIBBLE WILL NOT BE TAKEN IN REPLY

if its demands were turned down, finally and conclusively?

It was the concensus of opinion that diplomatic relations between the two countries would then be broken off by the president.

As to what this would lead to—the president was understood to hold that a break in relations would not necessarily mean a German declaration of war; that the United States would not take the initiative in declaring hostilities was deemed a foregone conclusion. The next question which naturally suggested itself to the official mind was:

What would follow a German war declaration?

Not Much Actual Fighting

Most authorities took the stand that, declaration or no declaration there could not be much in the way of actual fighting under existing circumstances.

The United States was not regarded as likely to send troops to Europe; Germany, it was felt, was in no position to carry warfare to the shores of the United States.

Officialdom accordingly "guessed" that the country would simply begin preparations for an active struggle at some future time, in case Germany, at the European struggle's end, should be so situated as to make an attack. As this period of preparation would extend it was said, over months or a year or more, officials who speculated concerning a contingency of the kind, declared it would find the United States in a state of readiness, at its end, which would make any would-be belligerent pause.

In one respect, it was conceded, the Germans could cause trouble—

Their submarine attacks on American shipping in the war zone, hitherto accidental where they have occurred or are suspected to have occurred, naturally would become intentional and the losses which Americans have sustained thus far, presumably would increase in large proportions.

The suggestion that the American navy might be engaged, even though clashes on land between American and German troops were, in the nature of things, impossible, was scouted by experts. Inasmuch as the allies have been unable to draw the kaiser's sea force into the open, they said, there was no probability that the allies and the Americans combined would be able to do so. All, they opined, that might be expected was the torpedoing of an occasional American warship, should it enter the war zone, just as the allied warships have been torpedoed—a serious matter but not, on a large scale, significant.

Wilson Revises Message

The president did not, after all, dispatch his note to Berlin Wednesday night. Deciding on certain changes in detail, though none of material importance, he recalled the message from the state department to the White house and revised it. It was expected it would be forwarded today and made public soon afterward.

News was anxiously awaited of the British liner Transylvania, which, leaving New York last Saturday with many American passengers, was expected to be in the war zone. It was acknowledged that the torpedoing of this ship, too, would add to the danger of an unsatisfactory end to the negotiations the president is initiating. There was also much speculation concerning the reasons behind the German embassy's cancellation of the advertisement it has published for the past two Saturdays in many American newspapers warning Americans against trans-Atlantic travel in ships under any of the allies' flags. At the embassy it was said cancellation was simply because every one had seen the notice. However, there were those who thought they saw in the action a German recession from the kaiser's recent submarine policy.

FLINT CARMEN STRIKE

A Comfort.

A certain poor woman had received some new underclothes from one who had helped the family. BARNES PUTS UP T. R. FOR MEMBER OF ANANIAS CLUB

Passes Lie Direct to Colonel on Several Issues While on the Stand

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 13.—William Barnes today named former President Theodore Roosevelt for membership in the "Ananias club." Testifying in his own behalf the republican leader passed the lie direct to the colonel on several issues. Mr. Barnes took the stand in his $50,000 libel suit against Roosevelt shortly before noon. His examination is expected to take up all of the afternoon.

Barnes denied that he asked Colonel Roosevelt in 1899, when the latter was governor, to re-appoint Louis Payn as state superintendent of insurance. Roosevelt had testified that Barnes made many visits to see him about bills before the legislature. Barnes emphatically denied this.

Other witnesses testified in contradiction to the testimony of William Loeb, former secretary to Colonel Roosevelt. Loeb said that Barnes and Roosevelt discussed the senatorship at a luncheon when Barnes is alleged to have told of an agreement with Murphy. These witnesses declared the luncheon did not take place until long after the senatorship was settled.

BRITISH WARSHIP GOLIATH IS SUNK

She had a speed of 18.2 knots and a compliment of 750 men.

The British submarine E-14, Churchill announced, reported that she sank two Turkish gunboats and a large transport in an engagement inside the Straits. The loss of life aboard the Turkish ships was not estimated.

The announcement from the First Lord of the Admiralty was the first official word that the allied fleet had been again actively engaged inside the Dardanelles. Though early dispatches to the admiralty did not say exactly how the battleship was torpedoed, it was reported that a torpedo was shot against her side by one of the shore batteries the Turks have mounted for that purpose.

The Goliath is the third British battleship known to have been sunk in the Dardanelles operations.

RAITH DAMAGE SUIT AGAINST CAR MEN IN CIRCUIT COURT

With the opening of the $10,000 suit against the Wisconsin-Minnesota Light and Power company instituted by Joseph Raith, Goose Island farmer, in circuit court this morning, Judge E. C. Higbee excused all jurymen not serving in the Raith case.

Raith and his wife seek to recover damages for an accident which happened on the causeway between the North and South sides, when a street car struck their buggy and threw them out. It is their contention that they had no opportunity to turn away from the car as the street was being repaired and a steam roller stood in the way.

Attorney George S. Gordon is representing the street car company and Attorney George W. Bunge is counsel for Raith.

JANE ADDAMS PRAISES WILSON

Says to Go to War Over the Lusitania Would Only Make Matters Worse

BY WILBUR S. FORREST
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, May 13.—Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, noted woman suffrage leader and peace advocate, today applauded President Wilson for his handling of the delicate situation precipitated by the sinking of the Lusitania.

"It is a very shocking and trying situation," said Miss Addams, who came to London after the women's peace congress at The Hague. "But I think it would only make things worse for America to go to war. There must be some spot left in the world where people may live normal, sane lives.

"Colonel Roosevelt and I never agreed regarding war. He thinks that now is the time for America to show her teeth. My views accord with those of Secretary Bryan, who is a pacifist and with those of President Wilson, who so nobly kept us out of trouble in Mexico.

"There is every reason why we should keep out of this horrible conflict. One is our cosmolitan population which would mean at least grave dissentions in the event of war."

As a result of the eccentricities of the time piece, Anderson today asked the city for $25,000 damages.

MONEY AND DEVELOPMENT

On a trip through upper Wisconsin the editor of Orange Judd Farmer found that the recent development of farm loan companies has already placed $80,000 in a single county—this by a single loan company in less than a year and at interest rates comparable with those paid in the older portions of the middle west. The slogan of the bankers' association: "Wisconsin money for Wisconsin development" is a reality and not a fiction. The rapid development of a new region needs capital and it is evident that upper Wisconsin will not be hampered in that direction in the future.

Leakless Inner Tubes

Goodyear Laminated Tubes Built Layer on Layer—Extra Thick

Here is something every motorist should know.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are built of many thin layers—each of pure rubber—vulcanized together. No flaw can be hidden as in a thick piece of rubber. It is seen and eliminated. Every layer is perfect.

Such a Tube can't leak. And our valve patch can't leak, because it is part of the Tube and not stuck on.

Remember that. Many a tire trouble is due to leaky Tubes.

14% Heavier

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are extra heavy. They have always outworn any tire. But this year we have added 14 per cent to their average thickness—all pure rubber.

And our Tube prices this year are reduced 20 per cent. So these layer Tubes, extra-thick, now cost about the same as others.

Always Gray

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are not colored. They are gray—the natural pure rubber color. Color requires a large percentage of mineral adulteration. And minerals hold heat, a Tube's worst enemy.

Whatever tires you use, get Goodyear Tubes. They will outlast your tires, save you leaks and trouble. They will also convert you to Goodyear Fortified Tires, built by the same high standards.

THE GOOD JUDGE WANTS EVERY MAN TO HAVE THE COMFORT OF SATISFACTION

IT makes everybody feel good to know that a little of the Real Tobacco Chew gives a lot more satisfaction than a mouthful of the old big chew sort. There you have the reason why men like to tell each other about the Real Tobacco Chew.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED. RIGHT-CUT IS SHORT SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

"Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste."

YESTERDAY'S HOMERS

Schulte, Cubs, off Pfeffer, Dodgers.

Gainor, Red Sox, off Covaleski, Tigers.

Konetchy, Pittfeds, off Krapp, Buffeds.

Groh, Reds, off Mathewson, Giants.

Burns, Giants, off Dale, Reds.

Christy Mathewson has put over his first 1915 win, but when the Reds can nick him for eleven hits, he don't look just like the Old Master of other years.

The Tigers finally lost a game, but it took a former Tiger, Del Gainor, to do it. Ol' Sam Crawford got three hits.

The Braves played in 1914 form—had one big inning in which they put over five runs—and beat the Cards.

Red Faber, Comiskey's 1914 find, came through with a win, his fifth straight, and the Senators now are forced to rely on Walter Johnson today.

Not even a triple play can stop those speed mad Yanks. Cleveland pulled one yesterday, but the story was the same—Yanks won.

The Dodgers torpedoed the Cubs in a damp nine innings at Brooklyn. When the Cubs came up for air they were about six runs short of a victory.

COMPETITION IN DENTISTRY

For a great many years, up until a few years ago, the fees for dentists' services were based on a sliding scale. During that time every dentist "was after the job" and there was real competition in dentistry.

Then came the period of Combination or, as we call it, "Organization" (the professions have organized as have other lines of industry), and the usual activity in attempting to eliminate all the elements of competition from the "business side of dentistry."

Experience has taught us several methods employed for this purpose; the little fellow gets out his hammer and knocks (by his actions you shall know him), others will "explain," but the big interests attempt to pass legislation making it illegal to violate the provisions of their "TRUST REGULATIONS," attaching as a penalty for infractions of "their Code of Ethics" the revocation of the license of any dentist who has the courage to follow the dictates of his conscience.

Well do I remember the time when dentists would boast to each other of their good work instead of the high fees they were getting. In those days the best workman usually obtained the best remuneration for his services. That was before it was "unprofessional to work for a lower fee" or guarantee work.

I am not a member of any organization whose sole requirement for admission is that applicant will refrain from "Advertising," "Cutting prices," etc., nothing being said of a standard of excellence as membership requirement.

My prices are based on the reasonable profit plan and the assumption that I will do a certain amount of work per year, which past experience makes an absolute certainty. There are other considerations which enable me to give you "Better Dentistry" for "Less Money." Come in and let's talk it over.

ARRIVAL OF 13,000 WOUNDED SCARES CONSTANTINOPLE

Crowds Parade Cursing War as Extent of Losses Comes Home to Them and Sultan Would Abdicate

TURKISH WOUNDED TOTAL 40,000

Confirms Suspicion of Populace That Stories of Successes Are Official Fabrications

BY HENRY WOOD
(United Press Ctaff Correspondent.)
(Copyright,1915,by the United Press. Copyright in Great Britain.)

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 11.—By Courier to Athens, Thence by Cable via London.—Arrival of 13,000 Turkish wounded this morning converted Constantinople into a city of terror. Crowds—mostly women—this afternoon paraded the city, cursing the war and those responsible for Turkey's predicament. Sultan Mohamed, according to a report reaching the American quarter, has threatened to abdicate.

The young Turks have given the city authorities carte blanche to prevent uprisings directed against the present government by the Mussulmans opposed to Enver Pasha's dominance.

Promise Looting in Case of Victory

It is persistently reported that the city authorities have promised the loyal Mussulman population permission to enrich themselves by looting in the event of a big Turkish victory.

The wounded brought in today have horrified the city with their stories of terrible Turkish losses—the first confirmation the population has had of what it has for some time suspected. Those today—the first big batch brought into the city—bring the total of Turkish wounded up to 40,000. The dead are not known and the extent of the casualties from wounded are only ascertainable because of the overcrowding of field hospitals necessitated using Constantinople quarters.

Turk Offensive Fails

The Turkish offensive against the allied forces on Gallipoli peninsula has failed. The guns of the French and British warships as well as the allied landing parties have inflicted terrific losses in Turkish land forces along the Dardanelles. The stories of the returning wounded have frustrated the Young Turks' efforts, through official communiques, to make the populace believe the Turks have met with success.

Allied aeroplanes which flew over the city today added to the hysteria of the populace, though no damage was done. Wholesale arrests of Armenians (Christians) have been made following discovery of an alleged dynamite plot against the sultan. The ruler is tonight reported to be shaken by indications of popular disapproval of the war, that he threatened to abdicate in favor of the heir presumptive, Prince Youssouff Izzeddine.

Young Turks Stick

Despite the obviously precarious local situation, the Young Turks are apparently determined to continue their resistance to the end and fresh reinforcements are tonight being rushed to the Dardanelles.

HARDLY SHOP OF GERMANS IN EAST LONDON IS WHOLE

Mobs Smash Furniture and Even Tear Rugs and Pictures to Bits in Rage

CONTINUES ALL OVER ENGLAND

Constables Are in Constant Clash Today with Mobs in the Provincial Districts

LONDON, May 13.—Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons this afternoon that all adult alien enemy males will be interned.

LONDON, May 13.—A heavy downpour early today dispersed anti-German mobs that ran amuck all over London during the night, defying the police and smashing German and Austrian shops and eating houses. Following a night of terror, frightened German residents today were barricaded in their homes in many districts. Strict orders were given the police to use drastic means to prevent a repetition of the riotous scenes and the authorities promised severe punishment for the mob leaders arrested last night.

Ruin East End Shops.

Particularly in the east end did the rioters vent their wrath against Germans, though hardly a section of London was left untouched. Practically every German shop of any description in the east end was in ruins today. The mobs smashed furniture, wrecked interiors and even tore rugs and pictures to bits in their rage over the sinking of the Lusitania.

Later in the day rioting broke out again in certain parts of the city. A German owned public house in Cannington was raided by a mob and partially wrecked.

All Over England.

Reports from provincial towns north of London said that the rioting continues. All German butcher shops, bakeries and restaurants have been closed and are under heavy police guard. Special constables were in constant clash today in the provincial districts with maddened throngs that pursued Germans and Austrians regardless of whether they had been naturalized or not.

A special cabinet order for the internment of all male enemy aliens was to be promulgated today in response to demands from all sections of the country since the torpedoing of the Lusitania. The authorities expressed the hope that the issuance of this order would put a stop to the mob scenes occurring all over England.

African Towns the Same.

JOHANNESBURG, S. A., May 13.—Serious rioting by anti-German mobs broke out here today. Police are having the greatest difficulty restraining the angry crowds. The authorities attribute the outbursts to the prominence given by the newspapers to cable dispatches telling of anti-German outbreaks in England.

Several fires were discovered in sections peopled largely by Germans today. During the night many German beer halls and shops were wrecked. Fifty-one buildings owned or occupied by Germans have been completely wrecked thus far. The total damage was estimated by the authorities at $1,250,000.

SOAP IS BAD FOR THE HAIR

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), is cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

SUFFRAGE VOTE LOST BY DECISIVE VOTE

Assembly Indefinitely Postpones Proposal to Allow Counties to Grant Equal Suffrage

MADISON, Wis., May 13.—(Special.)—The last hope of the woman suffragists was snuffed out in the assembly Wednesday evening with the defeat of the Johnson bill, permitting counties to grant equal suffrage in local elections. The suffrage vote fell off from the vote on the state wide referendum bill the final test resulting in a vote of 57 to 27 for indefinite postponement.

The Woodard bills, appropriating $800,000 annual state aid for highways and limiting the expense of the state highway commission to $50,000 annually were ordered to engrossment, after several amendments were defeated. These included one amendment reducing the amount of state aid to $500,000 annually, and another increasing it to $1,000,000.

The bill creating the Board of Public Welfare, which combines the board of control, the dairy and food commissioner, the treasury agent, oil inspector, and board of health under one board was ordered to engrossment, after the adoption of an amendment, providing that oil inspectors should not inspect creameries.

The Hambrecht bill raising the tuition of non-resident students at the university was placed on final passage by a vote of 45 to 32.

3 AGED BROTHERS ARE FOUND KILLED

LOWRY, Minn., May 13.—Difficult work this morning faced a coroner's jury that will attempt to ascertain the cause of the death of John, Amund and Stren Mittnoen, brothers whose ages range between 60 and 70. The bodies were found on the farm after a neighbor became suspicious of their inactivity. The bodies appeared to have been dead for two days, and to have been clubbed to death. No clues have been found.

Immune From Appendicitis.

The famous surgeon and traveler, Dr. Nicholas Senn, while visiting the hospitals and towns on the African East coast, was informed by the physicians he met that they had never come across a case of appendicitis among the black natives who live mainly on fruit and vegetables. Doctor Palier also found the same experience among the Brahmins of India, who are strict vegetarians.

WILLARD HERE

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 13.—Jess Willard, heavyweight champion of the world, who appears here today as a cowboy in a wildwest show, was today decorated with the rank of hero. While an electric storm raged, threatening to tear down the circus canvas, he stood calm and prevented a stampede.

LAW TO PREVENT INTOXICATED MEN FROM JOYRIDING

MADISON, Wis., May 13. — The Jenson bill providing a penalty of from five days to three months in jail for the driving of automobiles by intoxicated persons was supported before the joint finance committee yesterday by Mr. Jenson and Mrs. L. A. Kahlenberg, representing the state federation of women's clubs. Mr. Jenson said it was approved by the Wisconsin Automobile association. He said an amendment had been suggested to provide that for repeated offenses the car be taken from an intoxicated driver and placed in a garage temporarily, the charges to be assessed against the driver.

FALSE NEWS KILLS MOTHER

DULUTH, Minn., May 13.—Although Millie Baker, noted Duluth opera singer, on board the Lusitania, may be safe in a hospital in a little Irish village along the coast, her aged mother here probably will not survive the shock. This was the situation today when messages arrived saying that Miss Baker is probably safe. A woman by the name of Baker is in an Irish hospital and there were no other Bakers on the passenger list.

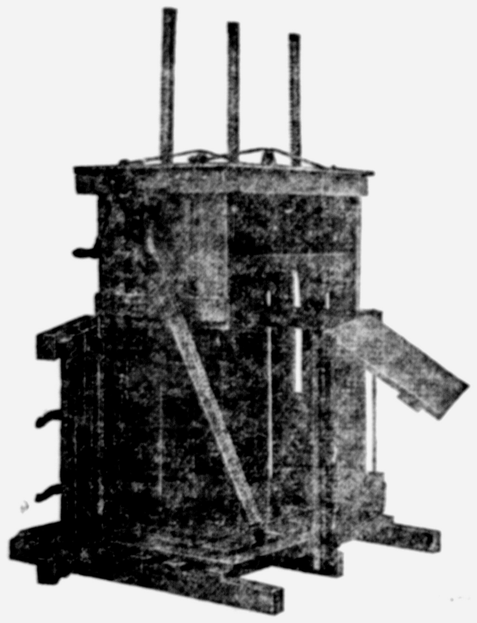
Protect Yourself Against Fire and Let Your Waste PaperPay YourInsurance



The average business man does not realize the amount of waste paper he has each year, or its commercial value, when it is baled by heavy pressure and wired, making it convenient to handle, with freight rate much lower than on hay.

In fact, the average waste paper prices per ton compare very favorably with the price of hay the year round the country over.

Can you find a business man that would burn up from one to five or fifteen tons of hay each year? He will no sooner burn or give away the paper when he realizes its value when baled. One ton of mixed paper will pay from 10 to 30 per cent on investment of a Business Men's Paper Press.

With a man's business growing larger each year, the waste paper more plentiful and prices advancing on waste paper as the pulp timber is getting scarcer, a baler becomes a necessary part of each store's fixtures.

There is over two million dollars paid each year by Michigan Paper mills ALONE for old Waste Paper of this kind.

While local paper buyers cannot afford to waste time picking up loose paper even if it were given to them, they will pay good price per ton when baled and come after it.

Our baler in the business house is used as a receptacle where the paper can be thrown more easily than in the furnace or on the dump heap to be burned.

"Whys" of Moves in European War

(By J. W. T. MASON)

NEW YORK, May 13.—About three weeks have passed since the British army under Gen. Hamilton landed on the Gallipoli peninsula. During that time little progress has been made in the effort to capture the Dardanelles fortifications from the rear, and England is being warned the work will be long and tedious.

It is probable the allies once more have under-estimated the power of the opponents. The attempt on the Dardanelles showed the admiralties at London and Paris have not rightly estimated the power of the Turkish forts and now it is beginning to appear as if the war departments of French and England had been amiss.

Coincidentally with the Gallipoli campaign a large British force estimated at between 20,00 and 30,000 men was thrown on the shore at Enos, the nearest point to Adrianople on the gulf of Saros. This army seems to have been swallowed up. Its disapperance from the news of the Levantine operations is complete. It cannot have met with any success or the British government, desirous of giving Englishmen all possible encouragement, would not have failed to announce the fact. Nor can the Turks have inflicted a crushing defeat on the invaders and be now keeping the matter secret. It is more probable that the force at Enos is stuck in his trenches and a dead lock has resulted which gives neither belligerent an opportunity to make official announcement. The Enos expedition is, therefore, in all probability too weak to exert any influence on the campaign against Constantinople.

At the very beginning of the land operations against Constantinople, it was pointed out the greatest danger to the allies was the possibility that the Turks would be held in contempt as a fighting force. This blunder now seems to have been committed. After delaying the movement of troops to the Levant a sufficient time to permit the Turks to prepare elaborate entrenchments, the allies now seem reluctant to spare enough men from the west to ensure Constantinople's downfall. Luck is being trusted to do work of efficiency.

DISCUSS WHEAT MOVING

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 13.—Confronted with the problem of moving another bumper crop of wheat that will be harvested in this territory within sixty days, 100 operating employes of the Rock Island road in the central west gathered here to discuss methods of keeping the cars in transit without the loss of time. Everything possible will be done to prevent a car shortage.

Best Hour for Reconcillation.

A police justice in speaking before the Woman Taxpayers' league of Michigan said: "For some reason I find it easier to reconcile a man and his wife between the hours of eight and nine in the evening, rather than the same hours in the morning. Just why I do not know—perhaps there is a mellowing influence at that time—but it's a fact."

FEIN REFUSED TO "CROSS" UNIONS

"Dopey Benny" Had Standard and Thought He Was Leading Labor's Cause Says Prosecutor

Cost of Hiring New York Gun Men

For raiding and wrecking small manufacturing plants, $150.

For raiding and wrecking large manufacturing plants, $600.

For shooting a man in the leg or "clipping his ear off," $60 to $600.

For throwing factory foremen down elevator shaft or breaking his arm or thumb, $200.

For "complete knockout" of any important individual, $200.

NEW YORK, May 13.—"Dopey Benny" Fein, gang leader whose confession led to the indictment of 24 labor leaders and gun men on charges ranging from assault to murder, refused offers of $7,500 to "double cross" the men who hired him. This statement was made today by Assistant District Attorney Breckinridge who has charge of the case. Fein declared that they approached him and offered him $7,500 more than he was receiving to use his gunmen against the unions that were employing him. Fein turned this offer down flatly. Breckinridge declared he has substantiated Fein's statement by talking to different men.

"The man had a standard. He told me that he was doing a great work—leading what he thought was labor's fight against unscrupulous manufacturers. I really believe that he would have furnished his gunmen to the unions for nothing if he had to do so. He saw that they were willing to pay, however, so he took the money," said Breckinridge.

Breckinridge's admission that manufacturers had told him that they had tried to hire gunmen to intimidate the union leaders has stirred union officials on the east side. They want to know why the manufacturers were not included in the wholesale indictments.

WISCONSIN AT THE FRONT

That settlers are comiing to Wisconsin as they never did before is indicated by the fact that at one town in the upper portion of the state 40 carloads of settlers' effects have been received this year, as against 26 carloads during the whole year of 1914. That is making progress and that progress appears to prevail generally over the upper counties. It means rapid development of the state—and more business for everyone.

GOOD TIME ASSURED COMMITTEE SILENT

Visitors to Eagles' State Convention at La Crosse to Be Well Taken Care of; a Good Time Guaranteed

Just what will furnish entertainment for the 20,000 visitors to the Eagles' state convention to be held in La Crosse, week of June 21st, is to a certain extent clouded in mystery.

It is well known that there will be afternoon and evening excursions on the Mississippi river aboard the big, palatial excursion steamer Sidney, and there will be many automobile trips to the various points of interest about the city, but after divulging this information, the committee gave an imitation of a clam. They assured the interviewer that these trips by no means ended the plans for entertainment. There are many other features planned that will be better understood and enjoyed when the visitor reaches the convention city.

The committee very positively states that if any visitor leaves La Crosse without having the time of his life it will be entirely his own fault, as there will be plenty to do and plenty to see, and the visitor will put in a busy week if he takes advantage of all the plans that have been laid and are being laid.

The La Crosse aerie has prepared for this convention in a way that will make history for this state. Old ideas and worn-out precedents have been thrown aside, and this convention will be conducted along entirely new and novel lines.

KANSAS NERVOUS AS USUAL—NOW IT'S A NEW PEST

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 13.—With a bumper wheat crop almost ready for the harvest, Kansas is nervous. The Sun Flower state always gets nervous when only a few weeks remain before the golden wealth already in sight is to be safely stored away. The latest worry is maused by the discovery of a new wheat pest which causes patches to turn yellow, and which spreads from field to field, reducing the yield. Experts called from the agricultural college have not yet identified it with any of those long Latin names. They don't know what it is.

An to Argument.

Argument is generally waste of time and trouble. It is better to present one's opinion and leave it to stick or not as it may happen. If sound, it will probably in the end stick, and the sticking is the main thing.—Samuel Butler.

GERARD THROWS OUT A CITIZEN ABUSIVE OF U. S. OFFICIALS

BERLIN, Via The Hague and London, May 13.—American Ambassador Gerard forcibly had ejected from the American embassy, Maurice Somborn, European director of the National Sweeper company of Torrington, Conn., and Marion, Ind., for abuse against President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan.

He has appealed to the German government asking them to expel the offender.

The incident became known today. Somborn, who is a resident of Marion, Ind., and a naturalized German-American, called at the embassy to see Gerard. He told the American envoy that Secretary of State Bryan had "accepted British bribes."

"I won't have anybody insult the secretary whom I represent in my office," Gerard exlaimed. "Get out!"

"I won't get out," Somborn retorted. "I have evidence that Bryan is bribed."

Gerard repeated his admonition to the man to leave and when he still refused, called his butler, who finally ejected Somborn, using force.

"I will ask the German government to expel Somborn for his repeated abuse of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan at this embassy," said the ambassador to me today.

Very Nicely English.

This curious Bengali English was used to advertise a circus in India: "Some horse will make very good tricks. The klown will come and talk with that horses therefore audience will laugh itself very much. The lady will walk on horses back and horse is jumping very much also. One man will make so tricks of trapeze audience will fraid himself very much. One lady will make himself so bend, then everybody he will think, he is the rubber lady. This is the very grand display. This is the very better gymnastics. One man will walk on wire tight, he is doing very nicely because he is professor of that."

Black as Mourning.

Anne, queen of Charles VIII. of France, was the originator of black as a token of mourning, wearing it upon the death of her husband in 1498. Contrary to that, the accepted mourning of Europe was white.

Black, however, gained great popularity and was quickly adopted. So marked was any deviation from the unwritten law that Mary Queen of Scots was termed the White Queen because she held by the ancient custom when mourning for Lord Darnley.—London Answers.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, May 13.—The stock market opened weak today. Almost without exception all leading features showed declines in the first sale over the closing prices yesterday. U. P. was off ⅛ at $1.25; U. S. Steel off ¼ at 53½; Reading off ¾ at 143½ and Erie off ⅛ at 25¾.

The market was steady for a while after opening but weakened towards the end of the first hour. There seemed to be good buying on a scale down but not enough to maintain a level of prices.

Trading continued comparatively light around noon though leading stocks recovered from the low prices of the earlier morning. Steel sold at 53, Union Pacific at 124⅝ and Copper at 67⅛.

Trading was extremely light in the early afternoon. The market was a waiting one. Studebaker sold down to 64, three points below Wednesday's close. Goodrich was declined, reaching 41¾, 2½ off from yesterday's close.

The stock market closed dull and lower.

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, May 13.—Very free selling of wheat at the opening, caused by lower cables, resulted in sharply lower prices today during the morning hours. Toward afternoon, however, there was quite a deal of support from buyers and where prices had been down 2, 1¾ and 2⅜ below yesterday's close at today's opening, prices later today advanced 1⅛, 1⅛ and 1½ above the opening on the rush to buy.

Corn acted in sympathy with wheat and was aided in the early dip by bearish Argentine reports and lower cables. Later there was considerable buying and prices at one time went ⅜, ⅛ and ½ above the opening.

Oats were down slightly at the opening in company with the other cereals. There were fractional advances later on May and September while July remained unchanged.

Provisions were inactive and lower at the start. Later some buying developed and there were slight advances.

SECRETARY DONALD SAYS PRINT BOARD SHOULD REMAIN

MADISON, Wis., May 13.—(Special.)—Secretary of State John S. Donald came strongly to the defense of the present state printing board at the hearing on the bill submitted in behalf of the board before the assembly committee on printing Tuesday.

The bill calls for a considerable decrease in the number of reports printed by the various departments, adds Superintendent of Public Property and a practical printer to the present board, composed of the secretary of state, state treasurer and the attorney general.

Mr. Donald said the only charge against the present board was that it was an ex-officio board, and added that the board proposed by the investigating committee was no freer from that charge. The Governor, he said, was the busiest man in the capitol, and would have no time to devote to the matter, thus leaving the printing in the hands of two political appointees, the Superintendent of public property and the state auditor.

"It is folly to presume," he said in speaking of the proposed state editor, "that any man could be chosen with wide enough knowledge to write the reports of all the departments of state government. These are in many instances technical requiring the knowledge which only heads of departments can have. The committee bill would leave the determination of very important matters to minor appointees."

MRS. ARNER ASKS DIVORCE FROM MAN WHO BEAT HER

After four months of "wedded bliss" in which, according to the plaintiff there wasn't much "bliss," Mrs. Matilda Arner, bride of January 23, at Winona, Minn., has started divorce proceedings in circuit court against Leo Arner, her husband.

Mrs. Arner states in her complaint that her husband struck her one blow that caused an illness of several days' duration, and that he mistreated her frequently and finally deserted her.

The divorce case is the second filed here within a week by couples wed at Winona.

In a Braid.

A youthful bride had undertaken to keep house. She went to the municipal markets, of course. One day the man at the vegetable stall displayed, for her admiration, a bunch of fine asparagus, "picked not three hours ago," he said. The new housekeeper gazed upon the asparagus with unaffected amazement. "Does it grow like that?" she asked. "I always supposed the cook braided the ends of it."

WILSON QUESTIONS WEST ARMS STORY

WASHINGTON, May 13.—President Wilson told White house visitors today that he seriously doubted the authenticity of statements attributed to Duval West to the effect that an arms and ammunition embargo was the only means of restoring peace in Mexico. West went to Mexico as the executive's envoy and the latter intimated that, as he has himself had no report from him, he questioned whether he had expressed himself at all.

FIRST MASQUE IN ENGLAND IN 1512

Term Coined in Reign of Henry VIII but Form Used First Saw Light in Chaucer's Day

(By Howard Mumford Jones.)

Any attempt to present even in outline the complicated history of the English masque in the space of a newspaper article would be foredoomed to failure. From students of the drama the development of this literary form has drawn entire books, and I cannot hope even to summarize the conclusions of these scholars. In this and the next article I shall try only to indicate very cursorily some of the interesting points in the history of the masque from the fourteenth to the seventeenth centuries.

If anyone is curious in the matter he will find that the best books on this subject are the work of a German and of a Frenchman. The most exhaustive treatise is a study by Paul Reyher, entitled Les Masques Anglais, Paris, 1909, a work of 563 pages; the next best study is probably Rudolf Brotanek's Die Englischen Maskenspiele, published in Vienna in 1902. A more accessible account is that given in E. K. Chambers' The Mediaeval Stage, a standard English authority; in the Cambridge History of English Literature, the volume bearing the title The Drama Before 1642, Part II; and (as I remember) in the last Britannica. These can all be obtained in La Crosse.

The present article will attempt to sketch the history of this dramatic form up to the reign of James I. As I indicated in a former account, the origin of the term "masque" is very obscure, but it was certainly connected with a masked dance, and it certainly came from Italy. The first recorded use of the word in English is found in an old chronicle of Hall called "The Union of the Two Noble and Illustre Families of Lancastre and York." Hall was a master at describing court life and his word pictures have not yet lost their color. In that old history we are told that "on the daie of the Epiphanie at night," 1512, "the kyng with a. xi. other were disguised after the manner of Italie, called a maske, a thyng not seen afore in Englande." This king was Henry VIII, and the details of Hall's description show that this masque dance was a masked dance.

Earlier than that, however, John Lydgate, now chiefly remembered as a contemporary of Chaucer, but esteemed a poet of note in his own day, had really written, though he did not call it so, an allegorical masque—that is, a short piece to be spoken by costumed figures which would give excuse for a fancy dance. This "disguising" was written for the holiday season of 1427 or 1428, we cannot tell which, but it was made "by daun (dan) John Lidegate at Eltham in Christmasse for a momyng (mumming) tofore the kygn and the quene." There may have been similar attempts in the fourteenth century, but we are not sure, and Lydgate's short piece is as good a starting point as any. He wrote four other for "momyng" of one kind or another, all very moral, and allegorical, and mediaeval, and deadly dull.

As I hinted in my previous paper, the masque did not develop till the sixteenth century, and then by a union of the dance that Hall describes with an allegorical tableau whose figures spoke verses such as Lydgate wrote. Henry VIII—"good King Hal," "bluff King Hal" liked pomp and circumstance and a good time, and the court poets saw to it that he did not lack any of them. There were many short masques presented. A favorite device represented a number of knights personifying the courtly virtues who laid siege to a castle—the castle of beauty—wherein an equal number of ladies were imprisoned, the virtues of courtly love. After a parley the castle was besieged, the ladies captured, and the knights and ladies danced. There were similar disguisings on all sorts of occasions—births, marriages, the reception of great ambassadors, sometimes appropriate, sometimes not, but very interesting to read about. We cannot read them because very few have some down to us.

How Two Ex-Presidents Regard Wilson's Course

PHILADELPHIA, May 12—Former President William Howard Taft, addressing the Union League club:

"Weighing the consequences will not prejudice the justice of our cause or the opportunity to vindicate it, and this the president may be counted on to secure. It is the people's cause, not his alone, and he does well to allay excitement and to await the regular and studied action of the people's representatives."

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 13—In a formal statement, former President Theodore Roosevelt said:

"I very earnestly hope that we will act promptly. The proper time for deliberation was prior to sending the message that our government would hold Germany to a strict accountability if it did the things which it has now actually done."

TWO ARE SENTENCED TO A YEAR IN PRISON FOR CRIME TUESDAY

Joseph Heck and Frank Wilson were late Tuesday sentenced to one year each in state's prison, when a jury found them guilty to taking $4.60 from the person of Casper Lepsch, tailor at Viroqua, whose home is in La Crosse.

Lepsch had come here to attend dedication services of a local church. In the evening he did a little celebrating for himself, he said.

He met Heck and Wilson after the saloons had closed, and the men told him they knew where they could get "something to drink." They took him to their room and took what change he had from his pockets.

The Way of Life.

Life no doubt is paved with enjoyments, but we must all expect times of anxiety, of suffering and of sorrow; and when these come it is an inestimable comfort to have some deep interest which will, at any rate to some extent, enable us to escape from ourselves.—Sir John Lubbock.
